

Communications: case study of the UK's Office for Budget Responsibility

Tom Josephs

Outline of presentation

- 1) Objectives of approach to communication
- 2) Increasing transparency
- 3) Communication channels
- 4) Communication ‘strategy’

1. Objectives of approach to communication

Credibility, independence, transparency

- Provide credible, independent, transparent analysis
- Transparency is key: “I was convinced...that the biggest contribution we could make to the quality of fiscal policy and debate was to increase significantly the transparency of official fiscal forecasts and analysis”

Robert Chote, 2013, Britain's fiscal watchdog: a view from the kennel

- Why is transparency so important?
 - Improve public understanding and policy debate
 - Build trust in the council
 - Analytical self-discipline

2a. Increasing transparency

- We then produced a third economy and fiscal forecast, which allowed us to take on latest data and to ensure that our judgements on the fiscal forecast had been incorporated. We finalised this forecast and sent it to the Chancellor on 7 March, and we met with him and Treasury officials to discuss it on 10 March. Alongside our third fiscal forecast, we provided a pre-measures forecast of spending subject to the Government's new welfare cap.
- During the week before publication we produced our final forecast, incorporating the effects of the final package of policy measures. We were provided with final details of all major policy decisions with a potential impact on the economy forecast on 11 March. We provided the Treasury with our final post-measures forecast on 13 March. Our final fiscal forecast included the direct fiscal effects of the full set of Budget policy decisions, the final version of which was provided to us on 14 March.
- At the Treasury's written request, and in line with pre-release access arrangements for data releases from the ONS, we provided the Chancellor with a full draft of the EFO

2e. Increasing transparency

Limits on transparency?

Some limits in practice:

- 1) Legal restrictions: e.g. some taxpayer information
- 2) Internal workings/debate prior to final judgments
- 3) Obscure/unconsidered model outputs

Ultimately would consider requests consistent with UK's Freedom of Information laws

A brief guide to the public finances

Budget deficit rises in first half of 2014-15

Public sector net borrowing is up £5.4 billion year-on-year in the first half of 2014-15. While income tax receipts are expected to be end-loaded this year due to income shifting around last year's cut in the additional rate of income tax, genuine weaknesses mean it is looking likely that our full year receipts growth forecast will not be met.

First Welfare trends report published
16th October 2014

Our first Welfare trends report looks back at the past three decades of welfare spending and forward to prospects over the coming five years. We consider the key risks to our forecast for welfare spending, both inside and outside the Government's 'welfare cap'. Supporting documents can be accessed via the main Welfare trends report page [...]

What we do

The Office for Budget Responsibility:

- produces forecasts for the economy and public finances,
- judges progress towards the Government's fiscal targets,
- assesses the long-term sustainability of the public finances,
- scrutinises the Treasury's costing of tax and welfare measures.

4a. Communication 'strategy'

Direct and active/proactive around release of core outputs, generally lower profile at other times

Chart 7.J: Average number of articles each month featuring 'Office for Budget Responsibility' or 'OBR' (October 2010 to June 2014)

Note: given the parameters of the search, these results are indicative of a broad trend rather than a definitive measure of all articles and whether they were positive, neutral or negative in tone.

4b. Communication 'strategy'

Limited high profile interventions outside release of core outputs

Away from core reports:

- generally low profile: responding to technical questions, seminars, stakeholder outreach, 'context' speeches

- limited high-profile interventions. Only within remit and when analytical case is very clear:

- ▶ Greater impact
- ▶ Less risk of setting precedents
- ▶ Less risk to reputation for independence

Dear Prime Minister

I note that you said in your speech on the economy yesterday:

"As the Independent Office for Budget Responsibility has made clear, growth has been depressed by the financial crisis, by the problems in the eurozone and by a 60% rise in oil prices between August 2010 and April 2011. They are absolutely clear, and they are absolutely independent. They are absolutely clear that the deficit reduction plan is not responsible; in fact, quite the opposite."

For the avoidance of doubt, I think it is important to point out that every forecast published by the OBR since the June 2010 Budget has incorporated the widely held assumption that tax increases and spending cuts reduce economic growth in the short term.

To date our forecasts have used 'multipliers' that imply that every £100 of fiscal consolidation measures reduce GDP in that year by around £100 for

OBR hits back at Cameron on austerity

By Claire Jones and George Parker

David Cameron has been rebuked by his own budget watchdog for trying to spin his way out of economic difficulty, after the prime minister suggested that austerity was not to blame for the lack of growth.

Mr Cameron claimed this week that the coalition's deficit reduction plan was not responsible for the flatlining economy, blaming instead the financial crisis, a 60 per cent rise in oil prices and eurozone problems.

But the prime minister's claim that the Office for Budget Responsibility endorsed his view brought a stinging letter from Robert Chote, the fiscal watchdog's chairman, who said all OBR forecasts concluded that "tax increases and spending cuts reduce economic growth in the short term".

4c. Communication ‘strategy’

Context and objective (revisited)

- Remit: focused on forecasting and analysis, no policy recommendations, no analysis of alternative policies
- Institutional: new, small, initially lacked credibility
- Leadership: pre-existing reputations, experience with media

➔ Build institutional reputation through track-record of credible, independent, transparent analysis; rather than by “making waves”
